

E-mail disclaimer

The message you have received (including any eventual attachments) is intended for the sole use of the addressee(s). It may contain confidential information and should not be used by any person other than its intended recipient(s) and, in case it was received in error, must be deleted immediately. In case you believe you were not the intended recipient, please delete the message and advise the sender immediately.

The content of any message addressed to our customers and business partners is subject to our usual terms of business.

Internet communications cannot be guaranteed to be timely, secure, error-free or virus-free.